

GeoSpring™ hybrid water heater

Proof of qualified energy property for claiming tax credits for residential heat pump water heaters.

The American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 (ARRA) and the 2010 tax relief act (Tax Relief and Unemployment Insurance Reauthorization and Job Creation Act of 2010) made important changes to the homeowner tax credits for specified energy-efficient home improvements. Heat pump water heaters with an EF rating of 2.0 or better qualify for a tax credit for tax years 2009, 2010 and 2011.

For 2009 and 2010, the tax credit is equal to 30% of the full purchase price and installation labor costs of products purchased and installed between January 1, 2009 and December 31, 2010. The credit, which applies to heat pump water heaters and all qualified energy property purchased by the consumer, is capped at $1,500.

For 2011, the tax credit covers the purchase price and installation labor costs of products purchased and installed between January 1, 2011 and December 31, 2011. The 2011 credit for all qualified energy efficiency improvements is capped at $500, $300 of which may be applied to the heat pump water heater.

GE certifies that the model(s) listed below meets the criteria for "Qualified Energy Property" as set forth by Section 25C of the Internal Revenue Code.

Brand	Model	Energy Factor (EF)
GE	GEH50DNSRSA	2.35

IMPORTANT NOTICE:

Before making a purchase pursuant to the tax credit, GE recommends that the consumer have a tax professional review the consumer's current tax situation and subsequent eligibility for the tax credit as certain income limits and restrictions may apply.
